

The Federal Communications Commission

Dear The Federal Communications Commission,

I am told the FCC is considering changing the way in which phone calls are paid. My only hope is that it is in the right direction--that is, that it does not result in more fees for users who do not make a large number of calls. I use a tracphone and phone card. When I purchased a phone card, I phoned my telephone provider and asked why I had to pay for inter and intra connection fees when I did not use them. Their reply was "it is a federal mandated fee". That was an unsatisfactory answer and I still resent having to pay for service I do not use. Now it seems, more insulting fees are contemplated. Please. Enough. Do not add to our phone bills.

Sincerely,

Janice Park
